AMUSEMENTS.

—Hal Stephens and Harry Linton, two really funny comedians, and a company of pretty girls and clever men, will appear at the Paris Grand on Tuesday, October 4th, in their famous comedy, "My Wife's Family." The play was a big success when first produced; in fact, made Stephens and Linton two of the most prominent farcical stars in the show business. In the hands of this company, the play has been a greater success than their most ardent admirers predicted. They have surrounded themselves with a capable company of singers, dancers and comedians, and the show is one case of jollity from the raise to the fall of the curtain. Nothing tiresome—everything goes with vim. The songs are all new and the dances artistically arranged. The women are all handsomely gowned, the vocalists are artists, the comedians are funny. The scenery is all special. In fact, there is not a better opportunity to enjoy yourself for two hours and a half than to visit "My Wife's Family."

DEATHS.

—The funeral services of Mrs. Lodusky Allen were held yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the residence of C. Arnsperger, on Duncan avenue, by Elders Carey E. Morgan and C. W. Dick. The remains were interred in the Paris cemetery. Mrs. Allen was 71 years of age, and was familiarly known as "Aunt Duck," and was held in high esteem by all who knew her, being a good Christian and a life-long member of the Christian Church. Mrs. Allen lived the greater part of her life in the North Middletown precinct, but for the past two years has made her home in Paris. About a week ago she fell and received a severe shock, from which she never recovered.

The pall-bearers were: John T. Colfins, Warren Rogers, J. W. Skillman, Jr., Dr. B. E. Bean, R. M. Rice, Louis Rogers.

—The funeral of L. A. Reager, aged about 40 years, who died Wednesday of typhoid fever, takes place from the residence on the Kiser Station pike this morning at 9 o'clock. Services at the grave by Rev. W. A. Simmons and Odd Fellows' Burial in Millersburg cemetery. Mr. Reager is survived by his wife and two children. Pall-bearers: E. P. Clark, W. G. McClintock, J. S. Shoptaugh, Bishop Hibler, Will Clark, Frank Skillman.

JAPS ON THE MOVE.

They Have Crossed the Hun River Fifty Miles Above Mukden.

The Entire Absence of News From Port Arthur, It Is Feared, Indicates a Closer Blockade There—Canonading at Aniva.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 28.—The war commission adjourned early Tuesday evening without issuing further news from the front.

The Mukden telegram to the Berlin Lokal Anzeiger, reporting that the Japanese had crossed the Hun river 50 miles above the city, is believed to refer to scouting parties of Japanese whose presence there was recorded in the press dispatches of September 16.

The movement of Japanese forces on the Liao river, which was reported in a dispatch from Gen. Sakharoff to the general staff on September 26 is all the more significant since Siachan is the starting point of roads leading to Tie Pass, Mukden and Simintin. The announcement that the Russians are fortifying Pakoman, 25 miles northeast of Mukden, shows that Gen. Kuropatkin is preparing to check the flanking movement on Tie Pass from the west in case Simintin should have to be evacuated.

The entire absence of news from Port Arthur, it is feared, indicates a closer blockade there. Hitherto dispatches from Gen. Stoessel have been coming through semi-weekly.

A telegram received here from Batoum reporting that reservists are being transported along the Caucasian coast brings the first intimation that troops there are being mobilized. There are only two army corps in the Caucasus and one of these have apparently been ordered to the far east.

Tokio, Sept. 28.—Unofficial estimates place the number of sick and wounded Japanese soldiers under treatment in Japan at 45,000. The military hospitals at Tokio, Osaka and Hiroshima contain 10,000 each. Nine thousand have recovered sufficiently to be sent to mountain and health resorts. The system of handling and treating the sick and wounded is working splendidly and the death rate is exceptionally small.

Mukden, Sept. 29.—Many skirmishes and reconnaissances are reported to headquarters here, but except for these, quiet still prevails. In the fighting that has been taking place the Russian scouts have almost invariably shown superior to the Japanese, both in riding and fighting.

The Japanese movement up the Taitse river appears to be by a comparatively small force. Raiding parties from the Russian army bring in many prisoners. Reinforcements are arriving rapidly. Over one thousand convalescents have returned to duty.

The railway is in good working condition. Officers are distributing the reserve of stores that were brought up from Liao Yang, as adequate supplies are now coming in from the north. Details of the fighting near Inpu, between Bentslaputze and the railroad on September 26, show that Gen. Mischenko's scouts, accompanied by a battery of artillery, attacked a Japanese position where there were a battery of artillery, two squadrons of cavalry and two companies of infantry. The Japanese were shelled out of their position on a hill and suffered heavy loss. As they retired the Russians occupied the hill until nightfall, when they, too, retired under cover of darkness, having lost only three men.

The Japanese are sending out large parties of scouts daily with the object of checking the Russians' continuous raids.

The march of Gen. Rennenkampf's Cossacks around the Japanese right flank, which was mentioned in these dispatches on September 26, was a remarkable performance. Accompanied by a battery of artillery, the Cossacks covered 80 miles in 52 hours. They struck the enemy north of Bentslaputze on September 19, and thence continued south, circling the Japanese right flank and coming unexpectedly on the Japanese line of communication near Bentslaputze, on the bank of the Taitse river, September 22, inflicting considerable damage. The Japanese were thrown into great confusion but retired with a loss of only two killed.

A TORPEDO LOST.

A Reward of $250 Has Been Offered For Its Recovery.

San Francisco, Sept. 29.—Two torpedoes were lost last Friday from the United States submarine boat Pike, which has been experimenting in San Pablo bay under the direction of Lieut. MacArthur. One has been recovered by Italian fishermen. The other is still at large and may be exploded by a passing vessel. It is charged with 200 pounds of gun cotton. A reward of $250 is offered for its recovery. The one already found had lost its compressed air and was practically harmless.

VANDALS AT THE FAIR.

Several Valuable Oil Paintings of the Czar Mutilated.

St. Louis, Sept. 29.—When the Russian exhibit in the varied industries building at the World's fair was opened Wednesday it was discovered that several valuable oil painting of Emperor Nicholas had been torn from the wall and mutilated by some unidentified person or persons. Another portrait of the emperor, a handsome and valuable panel done in colored silk, has been torn from its support and subjected to the greatest indignity. The oil paintings were torn and there were marks showing that the features of the emperor has been stamped upon. The vandalism was reported at once to the exposition authorities and an investigation ordered.

TYPHOID FEVER.

Greater New York Is Threatened With An Epidemic of the Disease.

New York, Sept. 29.—Greater New York is at present threatened with what may be the severest epidemic of typhoid fever in its history. Not only are the number of typhoid cases reported for the three weeks of September ending last Saturday greater than that of any month last year, but since the beginning of the summer the death rate has been so much higher than formerly that the health department is now thoroughly alarmed and is bending every effort toward checking the disease. When it is considered that the spread of typhoid last year was greater than it has been for many years, the gravity of the present situation is indicated.

THE RACE PROBLEM.

Question Discussed By Rev. Dr. Strange and B. T. Washington.

New York, Sept. 29.—Before an audience that filled St. Thomas' Protestant Episcopal church, and in the presence of Booker T. Washington Wednesday night, Rev. Dr. Strange, bishop coadjutor-elect of the diocese of South Carolina, declared that one set factor in any real and practical solution of the Negro problem was the entire separation of the races in social, scholastic, religious and domestic affairs. When Mr. Washington arose to speak he virtually agreed with the bishop by saying the problem could not be settled by amalgamation or by deportation of the Negroes, but by earnest sympathy and co-operation of the races.

HUNTER'S DISCOVERY.

Part of a Human Skeleton and Charred Remains of Clothing.

Shawneetown, Ill., Sept. 29.—While hunting in the woods near here, Geo. Porter, a farmer, has found a part of a human skeleton and the charred remains of clothing lying in a pile of ashes. Hanging on a nearby tree was a coat in the pocket of which was a note signed by W. W. Martin, of St. Louis, who disappeared from his home in St. Louis about a month ago, stating that the writer contemplated committing suicide by cremation and that on that spot would be found the result of the attempt.

THE DIVORCE LAW.

Bishop Henry C. Potter Attacks it in Vigorous Terms.

New York, Sept. 29.—Bishop Henry C. Potter attacked divorce in vigorous terms in his report Wednesday in the annual convention of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of New York. He declared that unless the church set itself against the spread of the evil society would relapse into a state of practical barbarism, and he urged the clergy to set itself against divorce, which he characterized as a "Godless license which flings aside the most sacred vows because of vexatious uncongeniality."

AGAINST UNION LABOR.

Letter Purported to Have Been Written by the President.

Roosevelt Pronounces It An Absurd and Impudent Forgery and Steps Will Be Taken to Punish the Forgers.

Butte, Mont., Sept. 28.—When Senator Fairbanks and his party arrived here they found the republican leaders much exercised over the publication in the Miners Magazine, published at Denver by the Western Federation of Miners, of what purported to be a denunciation of labor unions by President Roosevelt and a denial of its authenticity by the president. The president's contradiction was sent to former Senator Lee Mantle in response to a telegram of inquiry from him and was as follows:

"White House, Washington, Sept. 26.—Your telegram received. The letter you refer to purporting to be addressed by me to Michael Donnelly and printed in the Miners Magazine of September 22, is, of course, an absurd and impudent forgery. I have written no such letter nor any letter even resembling it to Mr. Donnelly nor any one else. I have written Mr. Donnelly requesting to know if he has received any such letter and requesting him, if so, to at once lay it before the district attorney of Chicago to find out whether it is possible to discover and punish the forgers. (Signed) Theodore Roosevelt."

The letter in which the president was represented to have made his attack on union labor was addressed to Michael Donnelly, of Chicago, president of the Butchers and Meat Cutters' union. The document is given in full, with President Roosevelt's name attached, but without date, and it is stated that it was written in response to an appeal by Donnelly to him to interfere for the settlement of the late butchers' strike. Following are some extracts from it:

"I stand ready to do as my illustrious predecessor, Grover Cleveland, did, and assert the power of this nation against all local nullifiers. Last summer I felt impelled to write a letter calling upon my countrymen to put down lynching. But labor union terrorism and crime are as great a national menace as lynch law."

"Let me tell you that the first duty of the officers of the law, whether they be sheriff, constable, municipal officers, mayors, governors or the president, himself, is to maintain public order and put down the mob with an iron hand."

After advising Donnelly to put a stop to the strike the president is represented as saying: "In any case, be assured I will keep my hands off unless your folly brings you into collision with the laws of the United States, when my hand will go on in a way you will not like. So far as I am concerned you have barked up the wrong tree. I am not to be either wheedled or frightened into meddling with what is none of my business."

Denver, Col., Sept. 28.—Secretary W. D. Haywood, of the Western Federation of Miners, said Tuesday night that the reputed letter of President Roosevelt to President Donnelly was copied from the Wisconsin Toiler.

So far as the letter of President Roosevelt having been a forgery, Secretary Haywood says he was not aware of it. The Miners Magazine is published under the direction of the federation and both President Meyer and Secretary Haywood take an active part in its direction.

New York, Sept. 29.—The letter alleged to have been received by Michael J. Donnelly, the leader of the meat strike, purporting to be one sent by President Roosevelt, was copied from an editorial in the New York Evening Post of August 1.

The Evening Post says:

"The letter appeared as an editorial in the Evening Post of August 1, and was explicitly stated to be a letter which the president might have written with advantage to himself and the country."

"In other words it was confessedly an imaginary letter, written for the sake of bringing out certain truths in regard to the meat strike."

"We had no thought, of course, of being able to make even a presentable imitation of the president's literary style, and as the article was, at the time, commented on and reproduced somewhat extensively in the press, we never dreamed of its ever coming to figure as a 'campaign forgery.'"

Chicago River Tunnels to Be Changed.

Washington, Sept. 28.—Secretary Taft, under authority of the act of congress of April 27 last, Tuesday served notices on the city of Chicago and the street railway companies owning or controlling the tunnels at LaSalle, Van Buren and Washington streets, under the Chicago river, Chicago, to alter all the tunnels so that there shall be a depth of water of at least 22 feet over them. April 15, 1906, is fixed as the date when the lowering shall be completed.

St. Louis, Sept. 28.—Col. Charles Morton, of the Seventh United States cavalry, stationed at Chickamauga Park, and Mrs. Sabina P. Pemberton, of Pasadena, Cal., have been married at the home of Capt. F. R. Rice, in this city.

Many women are denied the happiness of children through derangement of the generative organs. Mrs. Beyer advises women to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I suffered with stomach complaint for years. I got so bad that I could not carry my children but five months, then would have a miscarriage. The last time I became pregnant, my husband got me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After taking the first bottle I was relieved of the sickness of stomach, and began to feel better in every way. I continued its use and was enabled to carry my baby to maturity. I now have a nice baby girl, and can work better than I ever could before. I am like a new woman."—MRS. FRANK BEYER, 22 S. Second St., Meriden, Conn.

Another case which proves that no other medicine in the world accomplishes the same results as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I was married for five years and gave birth to two premature children. After that I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it changed me from a weak, nervous woman to a strong, happy and healthy wife within seven months. Within two years a lovely little girl was born, who is the pride and joy of my household. If every woman who is cured feels as grateful and happy as I do, you must have a host of friends, for every day I bless you for the light, health and happiness Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought to my home. Sincerely yours, MRS. MAE P. WHARRY, Flat 31, The Norman, Milwaukee, Wis."

A Continual Strain.

Many men and women are constantly subjected to what they commonly term "a continual strain" because of some financial or family trouble. It wears and distresses them both mentally and physically, affecting their nerves badly and bringing on liver and kidney ailments, with the attendant evils of constipation, loss of appetite, sleeplessness, low vitality and despondency. They cannot, as a rule, get rid of this "continual strain," but they can remedy its health destroying effects by taking frequent doses of Green's August Flower. It tones up the liver, stimulates the kidneys, insures healthy bodily functions, gives vim and spirit to one's whole being, and eventually dispels the physical or mental distress caused by that "continual strain." Trial bottle of August Flower, 25c; regular size, 75c. At all druggists.—W. T. Brooks

Healthy Mothers.

Mothers should always keep in good bodily health. They owe it to their children. Yet it is no unusual sight to see a mother, with babe in arms, coughing violently and exhibiting all the symptoms of a consumptive tendency. And why should this dangerous condition exist, dangerous alike to mother and child, when Dr. Bochee's German Syrup would put a stop to it at once? No mother should be without this old and tried remedy in the house—for its timely use will promptly cure any lung, throat or bronchial trouble in herself or her children. The worst cough or cold can be speedily cured by German Syrup; so can hoarseness and congestion of the bronchial tubes. It makes expectoration easy, and gives instant relief and refreshing rest to the cough-racked consumptive. New trial bottles, 25c; large size 75c. At all druggists.—W. T. Brooks

LAWYERS' CONGRESS.

Universal Convention of Jurists in St. Louis.

Associate Justice Brewer Was Elected President—Ex-Secretary of State Foster Delivered the Principle Address on Arbitration.

St. Louis, Sept. 29.—The first universal congress of lawyers and jurists held under the auspices of the American Bar association convened Wednesday in festival hall at the conclusion of the American Bar association convention. Eminent lawyers and jurists from all over the world were in attendance. The congress was called to order by F. W. Lehman, of St. Louis, chairman of the exposition committee on congresses. President D. R. Francis welcomed the congress to the exposition and introduced the president of the congress, Hon. David J. Brewer, associate justice of the supreme court of the United States. President Brewer was greeted with an ovation of applause.

Former Secretary of State John W. Foster, LL.D., was introduced and made the principal address on the subject of international arbitration and The Hague tribunal. He said in part: "It has been reported in the press that the secretary of the navy has announced himself as in favor of a navy equal to the greatest navy in the world. I trust he has been misquoted. Our government should hold itself ready to enter into an agreement for international disarmament and not to the increase of the navy. This country should hold itself to other and far more peaceful pursuits in the settlement of strife than to the making of implements of destruction and death."

He then entered into an explanation of the failure of The Hague conference to effect an agreement on the subject of international disarmament. He expressed deep regret that the fruits of war made necessary the permanent increase of the American army and called attention to the prospective large increase in the annual expenditures of the government for the navy.

Senator Dom Emilido Velasco, of Mexico, and J. H. Ralston, LL.D., of Washington, followed with discussions of the subject presented by Mr. Foster. Senator Velasco said in part: "The idea of international arbitration is not the creation of one man nor of any set of men, however eminent they may be, but it is the result of universal sentiment. International arbitration has at the present time three forms: (1) Arbitration in its nature transitory and for determined matters; (2) Compromissory clauses inserted in treaties to decide the questions which the interpretation and execution of the treaty may give rise to; (3) Permanent and obligatory arbitration. Treaties of arbitration in these three forms have increased in number progressively, very especially in the first two forms. The last form is the one which offers the most resistance and various attempts made to establish permanent arbitration have proven failures."

"There are two difficulties which beset arbitration in these present times the resistance on the part of some governments to permanent arbitration and the difficulty of giving judicial form to questions of a political nature. The tribunal of The Hague, created by the collective action of the nations, with its character of permanency and with rules of procedure previously defined has in its support a great moral force and presents all the advantages and all the facilities which constituted tribunals of order. It is a tribunal open to all who ask its judgment and its examples and its practices will be an inducement to all the nations to entrust to it their difficulties for settlement."

INTERNATIONAL LAW CONGRESS.

Announcement of a Second Call For Peace Conference Discussed.

Edinburgh, Sept. 29.—The conference of the constitution of international law, which began here September 22, concluded Wednesday. President Roosevelt's announcement that he will shortly call a second peace conference at The Hague was discussed. Pratt, a civil engineer, who appeared as Wier's witness in the securing of the latter's papers. Pratt paid a fine of $300.

Roosevelt a Peril.

Mr. Henry Wade Rogers, former president of Northwestern University, a distinguished writer on Constitutional law department of Yale University, concerning President Roosevelt, expressed himself, in a speech before the Connecticut State convention week before last as follows:

"Since he became President he has shown, not only by his treatment of Panama and by his action in the pension matter, as well as by his dictatorial assumption of authority on every department of the Government such a disregard of the limitation of power as to lead many thoughtful men to distrust his wisdom. It is this district which, perhaps more than any other reason, has led the independent press of the country, almost without exception, to pronounce against him in this campaign and to regard him as a dangerous pilot for a great ship."

Two dollar wheat is now predicted. Roosevelt should issue a supplement to his letter of acceptance claiming credit for this great prospective increase in the price of the cereal.

MESSAGE TO FRATERNAL ORDERS.

Interesting News from Cincinnati With Local Confirmation in Paris.

The thousands of members of fraternal bodies in this State will be interested in the following message from John Theobald, a prominent Forester who lives at 1111 York Street, Cincinnati.

Mr. Theobald believes in living up to the motto of his organization, "Fraternal Love and Charity" and believes that he can do no more charitable act than to tell his experience in regaining health after years of suffering.

Mr. Theobald writes, "For five years I suffered with stomach troubles, having all the distress and misery that afflicts dyspeptics. I could not enjoy eating, thinking of the suffering that would follow. My food did not digest, and although I took all kinds of medicine, I found nothing to help me until I used Mi-o-na. Thanks to this remarkable remedy, I am now a cured man and believe that it made a permanent and complete cure."

Clarke & Co. are local agents for Mi-o-na, nature's cure for dyspepsia. It is in the form of small tablets and sell at 50c a box. The remedy has made so many and such remarkable cures amongst their customers, confirming Mr. Theobald's statement, that they will give their personal guarantee with every box they sell to refund the money if it does not cure.

Do not suffer longer. Here is a cure that costs you nothing, unless it restores health. Clarke & Co. take all the risk and you do not have to pay a penny unless you feel that you have received much more than your money's worth.

Held to Circuit Court.

H. I. Moore, one of the men arrested here on circus day, charged with robbery, was arraigned in Judge Smith's Court, Wednesday, for examining trial. Moore acted as his own attorney and waived examination and asked for bond. Judge Smith fixed his bond at $3,000, and in default of same was returned to jail where he will no doubt remain until Circuit Court convenes in November.

Jailer Judy has kept a close watch on Moore, and Tuesday was repaid for his watchfulness by finding on Moore a fine gold watch, which was identified as belonging to Miss Susan Nave, of Lexington. Jailer Judy says he believes Higgins has secreted some diamonds, and that he expects to find them if possible.

THE SCHOOLHOUSE.

Oh, make the schoolhouse beautiful
By hill and plain and sea,
Delight within and bloom without—
Picture and flower and tree.

For the boys and girls, while life shall last,
And wherever their steps may fare,
Will remember the lovely, joyous place,
Or the house forlorn and bare.

And the lore they gained, and the precepts heard,
And the patriot songs they sang,
Will be treasured still if the spot was dear.

In the days when life was young.

Let the guelder-rose and the lilac bloom
In welcome by the door,
And the turf be green the paths between,
And, above, the bright flag soar.

And plant the elm for its regal shade,
And the pine for its boughs of balm,
Magnolia with its lustrous leaves,
And the jasmine, by the palm.

For tree, and flower, and pleasant song,
And the tale by the pictures told,
Will help full many a youthful heart,
To turn life's gray to gold.

Then make the schoolhouse beautiful
By hill and plain and sea,
For the school is shaping, year by year,
The nation yet to be!

panion.

CHAPTER XX.

"SCAR FACE, THE AVENGER."

Nezer was not a bad boy at heart. To him Aunt Comfort was a rotund embodiment of all that was good and motherly in womankind. For her— if within call—he would run his legs off, and Angle was his idea of what angels were. He hated his best clothes and church-going equally, minded Angle at school with doglike humility, learned his lessons with surprising ease, and perpetrated the worst tricks with an innocent manner that disarmed punishment. He was the terror of the village when fruits were ripe, made the life of Hans a burden, and when up to Aunt Comfort's sight, always up to some new mischief aimed at him. He had fed that phlegmatic immigrant red pepper deftly hid in pie, coaxed him to take a noonday nap pillowed on a red ant-hill, and then when he was asleep, stirred up those vicious insects; he had caught an eel on a set pole and lowered it writhing on the hook down inside Hans' shirt when again napping, and finally put an active snapping turtle in his bed.

He did all these things out of pure mischief, but against David Curtis he bore a grudge. It dated from that unhappy epoch ending in a bread-and-water diet, and Nezer missed no chance to get square with David. In fact getting square with those who injured him was a cardinal point in the boy's nature. Another thing, he was close mouthed, and secretly not only plotted and planned, but afterwards enjoyed his revenge. How much fruit he stole from David's orchard, how often he let bars down and cows into cornfields, how much "garden sass" he maliciously destroyed in midnight raids, no one but himself knew, and he never told. For years he waged a guerrilla warfare alone on David, and then one day sharp and perhaps deserved punishment overtook him. There was a secluded pool in the upper Mizzy meadow owned by his enemy, and here Nezer and his mates were wont to come many times each summer to enjoy a swim. To reach it they had to cross David's best meadow, trampling the grass and quite destroying it about the pool. It angered David, to whom loss of even grass was misery, and whenever he caught them there, retribution with an ox-goad followed. They came under cover of night, however, and one boy would take turn as sentinel and David still suffered. He grew desperate, finally, and as a last resort, drove stakes along each bank of the pool and then strung a network of barbed wire across under water. It was a merciless and altogether heartless trap, and fate decreed one evening, that Nezer should be the first and only one to leap into it. How he suffered, pierced in a dozen places and terribly scratched, how his agonized screams were keen joy to David, how Nezer, dripping blood, ran after the rest of the boys and halted not until they reached safety and a chance to dress outside David's possessions, need not be enlarged upon.

Nezer had mildly hated David before—now it was changed to murderous intensity, and his only ambition was to seek revenge. He took none of the boys into his confidence, but true to the thief's caution, inherited from his father, resolved to act alone. And now while David was in sore distress over Martin Frisbie's probable legal assault and a growing dread of ghostly visitation, there occurred a series of events well calculated to drive a superstitious man insane. The first was to find that every tool in the saw-mill had vanished, crowbars, cant-hooks, extra saws, hammers, chains, were all missing in the morning. A new supply was obtained, and a few days later David was awakened at midnight to hear the mill going, and a shower of sparks flying from the saw playing up and down against a crowbar wedged in the log cradle. Later the grist-mill—never locked—was visited by a ghostly miller, and bags of grain poured into the raceway, belts cut, and, as a final message, the gates raised and millstones found rumbling at early dawn. It was no ghost, of course, even to the superstitious mind of David, but an enemy of the most malicious sort, and yet the property loss produced almost as much suffering as an actual spook. David locked and barred the mill doors after this, only to find it useless, for about once a week the mill was visited by this unrighteous enemy, and damage inflicted. Then he rigged a cordon of fine wire around the grist-mill, attached to doors and connecting with his house, so that any disturbance would communicate and ring a bell. It worked to the extent of causing David and his men to rush to the mill with lanterns to find the belts again cut, and the stones grinding away, but no sight or sound of an intruder. Then other depredations followed. A dog that had been secured as guard was found dead the next morning and swollen double from poison; a small raft of logs above the falls were cut loose and allowed to drift over and land in inextricable confusion below; stones took on a habit of entering the house unbidden through windows, and at odd intervals other night mischief was perpetrated. Then the two men who boarded with David grew nervous, and the old negress said, "I 'clare to gracious, dese premises is gittin' hanted, 'n' if it doan stop, I'll quit here, suah 's yo' born." She was only restrained by an increase in her wages, painful to David, and a temporary lull in the midnight visits.

Nezer, in addition to his mischief-inventing faculties, also dearly loved to masquerade. He had become the possessor of a few dime novels, one of which portrayed on the cover a realistic picture of "Scar Face, the Avenger," and to imitate the raiment and habits of this savage was keen enjoyment to Nezer. He had fashioned a head-dress and crest of turkey feathers, obtained a hideous mask, and, having hidden these in Aunt Comfort's barn, waited the right and proper occasion to exploit them in secret. To try their effect on Hans was too tame; besides Hans would give him away, and Nezer, always secretive, had grown wary with age. There was no limit to the fun he planned to have with that blood-curdling mask and head-gear, but his hero, Scar Face, had always swooped down upon his victims unawares, and Nezer felt he must. He had some time previously purloined an old night-shirt with the intention of playing ghost when Halloween came. He was also an expert in the use of stilts, and, nimble as a squirrel, could stride off on them faster than a man could run. With these accoutrements and a nature much akin to the dime-novel hero he worshipped, it may be easily inferred that Nezer was a combination quite likely to excite a quiet village like Greenvale.

And Nezer hated David Curtis with Scar-Face ferocity. For weeks David had lived a miserable existence, and worried as to the outcome of Martin's supposed enmity. He knew he was guilty, and once dragged before even the most petty tribunal would have no defense, but must make retribution to his brother's child and be disgraced as well. So sure did he feel this outcome was only a matter of time, he thought of forestalling it by going to Aunt Comfort and offering her a lump sum for Angle's past keep, and as much for her own signature releasing him from all obligation. He would have much preferred negotiating with Martin, but of that young man's relations with Angle he was not at all certain, and although more humiliating, it was safer to deal direct with the injured one. He was in this quandary when his direct persecution began, and as that continued, it became agony boiled down. To lose five cents was misery, but when the sum swelled to many dollars and depredations were repeated night after night, it became a torment. Then his ghostly dread grew apace. With all his vigilance, and aided by his men taking turns watching, not once had they seen or heard aught that betokened a flesh-and-blood visitor. All he knew was that sometime in the night some one visited his mills, wrought malicious mischief, and vanished. It was for revenge beyond question, but by whom, and for what? Was it some one in the village, or was it a stranger hiding in the woods by day, and stealing onto his premises by night like an Indian wreaking swift, unerring vengeance?

For weeks also David had not known one moment of peace or one hour of untroubled sleep. Not trusting his men even, he had kept watch himself, ready to sally forth at any sound, and when the depredations ceased, he still kept on expecting them. For a week this vigil continued, and then one night, half asleep and partially clad, David caught the sharp thud of a small stone thrown against his house, and bounding out heard the low rumble of the stones in the grist-mill across the Mizzy. The moon, a week past its full, had just risen, and as David paused a moment on the steps to listen, he noted how the mills, the trees, the bridge across the Mizzy, and the falls just above, seemed ghostly in the spectral light. It was dreadful, and those loud rumbling millstones more so. But revenge and greed conquered fear, and, keeping always in the shadow, and stooping as he walked, he started for the grist-mill. The trees gave partial concealment until the bridge was reached, and here he halted to listen once again. And what a weird, midnight scene it was, with the falls white in the moonlight, not ten rods away, their voice half concealing the rumbling millstones' deeper sounds, while all about the spectral shadows of the trees reached out to meet him. One moment only he paused, and then, still crouching, crept forward step by step down the little incline beyond the bridge, across the mill sluice, now filled with rushing water, then turning to the left up the driveway to the mill. Each step a little slower, as he drew near, and a loud thumping of pulse that beat upon his brain. And then, again, pausing with a sense of deadly fear, his mouth and eyes wide open—slowly, very slowly, from behind the mill, advanced a horrible something, with white ghostly body and hideous, leering face, above which waved a crest of feathers.

One moment only David stared transfixed with horror at the awful apparition, twice as tall as a man, and then, as it strode toward him with giant steps, he sank to the ground unconscious.

Nezer was avenged!

CHAPTER XXI.

A SHOCK TO GREENVALE.

Aunt Comfort was paring apples, Hannah putting away the breakfast dishes, Angie, with sleeves up, disclosing rounded arms, was washing a painful of green pickles Nezer had just brought in, when Aunt Lorey burst into the kitchen. "David Curtis was took with a fit last night," she gasped, "'n' he's gone ravin' crazy. Some on 'em heered him hollerin' like a loon 'bout midnight, 'n' the next he rushed into the house screamin', 'O Lord, Lord, save me!' They had to tie him hand and foot 'n' Dr. Sol says he's gone clean daff!" And having delivered this astonishing message, she sank into a chair, fanning herself with her apron. "For the lands' sake!" exclaimed Aunt Comfort, dropping her paring-knife, and staring at the caller with open mouth, while Angie turned in mute astonishment, her hands full of wet pickles. No one observed that Nezer suddenly vanished.

"And what was the cause on 't," continued Aunt Comfort, eagerly, "'n' is he likely to die?"

"Nobody seems to know," responded Aunt Lorey, "he was just took, that was all, 'n' what he was doin' out o' the house that time o' night is a mystery. They found the grist-mill goin' an' the men say 'tain't the first time that somebody's been prowl'n' round there nights for weeks back."

And this was a fair sample of the recital that spread like wild-fire over Greenvale that August morn. It had been known that strange happenings had occurred up at the Curtis place, that some enemy had made nightly visits there, stealing and destroying with evident malice, but who, and for what special reason, no one knew. Some said it was just compensation for his many well-known acts of meanness, a few ascribed it to supernatural causes, and one or two hinted that Amzi, half demented, might have escaped from some asylum and returned to thus avenge himself. This latter surmise, however, seemed so unreasonable that no one believed it.

"He has brain fever," was the explicit information Dr. Sol had imparted that afternoon, when he called at Aunt Comfort's, "and his mind is deranged. It was brought on, no doubt, by some sudden fright while out watching for this night visitor. He may recover and he may not. His age is against him."

"I s'pose we oughter go there and try to do somethin'," Aunt Comfort asserted to Angie later on. "He's been livin' like a hyena all these years, with that wench doin' the cookin', 'n' 'twon't do to let him die that way. He's your uncle, in spite o' his meanness."

And in thus rising above all sense of injury and personal feeling, Aunt Comfort showed her broad and truly Christian charity. But Angie was not so ready to respond. Her own early sorrow, the humiliation she had endured, the long-continued self-denials, the many times she had met her uncle well wrapped in a buffalo robe when she had to step out into the deep snow and let him pass, the countless times she had watched his hypocritical face in church, knowing he had been and was robbing her of her heritage, had sunk deep into her heart, and her first thought was, "Let him die alone like a dog; he deserves it!"

But Aunt Comfort was a beacon light of goodness and homely sense to her and she made no protest, and so it came to pass that these two angels of mercy took themselves to the cheerless home of David Curtis for the first time in many years.

And Aunt Lorey—who never missed attending all the funerals occurring in Greenvale, and was said to enjoy them—also accompanied these two, possibly expecting a funeral in this case.

"It's only good nursing that will save him," asserted Dr. Sol that night to Aunt Comfort, "but it's an outrage for you and Angie to stay here. He isn't worth it. Better let me hire some one."

But Aunt Comfort persisted, and all that long night and many others they ministered to their patient, tossing, groaning, and occasionally screaming in feverish delirium.

And what tragic revelations of guilty conscience and supernatural fear it was to them, for the sick man, in his delirious mutterings, lived over and recited all the dread fears and the agony of mind he had endured for many weeks.

But of David's sudden and mysterious illness and its outcome Dr. Sol's remark to Martin will best reflect the village verdict, and must be quoted.

"I never knew of such a complete case of heaping coals of fire," he said, "and such an object lesson in forgiving as Aunt Comfort and Angie have meted out to that old skinflint. But what caused his illness is a mystery quite beyond me. By all reports, his premises have been haunted by some malicious night visitor, and David must have gone out and met him."

It was many days ere Aunt Comfort and her assistant nurse could leave the sick man, and then he had to "persuade" Aunt Lorey, by means of liberal compensation, to remain and act as housekeeper, for the colored woman would no more set foot in "dat hanted" house than in a den of lions.

But the ghost manifestations ceased, for Nezer was too much scared by the hubbub he had created, and having hid his Scar-Face raiment, kept his secret to himself like a wise boy, and the mystery remained unsolved.

CHAPTER XXII.
SUNDAY EVENING.

In Greenvale, as in all rural towns, Sunday evening was "sparkin' night," when lads and lassies put on their very best, the front parlor was given up to Jane or Huldah, their swains allowed all possible chance to reach popping point, and the old folks kept shady. As a rule all the young folks gathered separately at the church, and when service was over, each rustic Romeo hurried to the porch to there await his heart's desire, and when the smiling maids "like snowbirds willing to be mated" appeared, faced the music with beating heart to receive joy supreme or the mitton. Only engaged couples walked to the sanctuary together, and to do so was a tacit admission of betrothal.

It was this solecism on Martin's part on his first Sunday evening that caused Angie so much embarrassment. He had not repeated it, in fact, so uncertain was he of his ground with her that he had avoided Sunday evening church attendance almost entirely afterwards.

By the time the excitement caused by David's night scare and almost fatal illness had subsided, Martin had made some slight advance in Angie's favor. She had been left alone a good deal, and he seized his chances. She also seemed to grow more cordial, and by degrees her cool reserve melted away. When Sunday evening came again, Martin, recalling Greenvale's social custom, resolved on a bold stroke, and calling early, invited her to join him churchward. For a moment she hesitated, knowing full well what would be thought of it, and then, as an extra shade of pink crept into her face, she consented. When the bell began to call, she joined him on the porch, dressed in spotless muslin, a solitary rose her only ornament, and, as Aunt Comfort would say, "lookin' sweet enough to eat." And well might Martin feel proud, for no fairer maid ever blessed a lover's eyes. For two months now, though they had met often, no mention had been made of the past. He had essayed it at first, but soon saw it to be unwise, and yet maybe that old-time illusion, like the sound of bells now calling them, had never ceased to vibrate in their hearts. We are moved by subtle influences, and memory is oftentimes awakened by the veriest trifle. The odor of a certain flower, a strain of music, the sighing of the breeze in the pines, even the croaking of a frog in springtime, will carry us back over a lifetime in an instant.

Only a few years, comparatively, separated the lives of these two—very short to him, but long and weary to her. She had much to forgive, but like many another patient woman who goes through life silently forgiving an erring husband, so maybe had she now forgiven a lover's desertion.

And very sweet the church bells sounded to Martin, for now the fairest and dearest of all earth's womankind was walking beside him in a journey that was a tacit confession.

There were speaking glances exchanged between matrons and maids in that Sunday evening gathering, and whispered "I told you so's," while the white-haired parson searched for his chapter. The congregation arose and sang as usual, Angie joining, while Martin covertly watched her, feeling proud. And when both bowed with the rest to receive dismissal, and then walked away in the balmy August evening, it seemed to him he ought to enclose her in one strong arm, lest she escape.

When the lane that crossed the Mizzy was reached, Martin halted. "Let's go down to the old red bridge," he said, and without a word Angie turned with him.

It was a secluded as well as a pretty spot; a group of willows shaded one end of the bridge and a pile of worn-out planks; below, the stream broadened into a wide pool and beside it grew sweet flag. It had been one of their old-time trysting places, and visited to gather flag and watch the moon's reflection in the pool.

A Gallant Butterman.

When the queen of England, daughter of the king of Denmark, was the princess of Wales, she attended, one afternoon, a food show.

At this food show there was a display of butter that pleased the princess of Wales greatly. She praised the butter, and to its exhibitor she said: "Denmark sends us the best butter, doesn't it?"

The dealer smiled and shook his head.

"No, your royal highness," he answered, gallantly, "Denmark sends us the best princesses, but Devonshire sends us the best butter."—N. Y. Tribune.

TO HEATER WANTERS:

"It has been but ten years since the attempt was made to prevent some people from prospecting too much." That is the way the President, in his acceptance letter refers to the Wilson tariff bill, dismissing it with Rooseveltian flippancy. That sort of horse-play will hardly impress the thoughtful with any other idea but that the subsequent high-tariff Republican bill was designed to help "some people to prosper too much."

PHILADELPHIA C. KNOX, who "busted" the Northern Pacific merger, but carefully refrained from touching any of the big trusts that plunder the people, is to make a few speeches for the Republican ticket. Mr. Knox, it will be remembered, was excused from Mr. Roosevelt's Cabinet in order that he might represent the Pennsylvania Railroad in the United States Senate.

MR. ROOSEVELT tried to twit "our opponents" about their position on the civil service law. "Our opponents" have not forgotten that President Roosevelt suspended the operations of the civil service act more than all his predecessors combined.
